This pamphlet has been prepared in response to such inquiries, and is addressed directly to owners of dwellings and to carpenters and builders who erect them. The majority of dwellings are outside the control of building ordinances, and those within the jurisdiction of such laws usually have but few restrictions; hence the field for use of this information is broad. The few specifications governing dwelling house construction in a Building Code are usually so scattered through the ordinance it is difficult for a person unfamiliar with such laws to ascertain exactly what is required. That fact further justifies codification of these well established principles for the protection of such structures. The pamphlet is distinctly educational in character, since naturally there is no authority to enforce its provisions. Many of the more important suggestions were extracted bodily from our Recommended Building Code, and still retain the imperative form of expression shall as indicating in our opinion the strict necessity for the requirements. Although other parts may be expressed less positively, it should not be inferred that they are unimportant. The principal idea in the preparation of the pamphlet has been to indicate so plainly the structural features necessary to make any house reasonably fire-resistive, that even a layman could understand them. It is hoped that home builders may be sufficiently impressed with the logic...
