This publication will be worth purchasing. It really is written in simple terms instead of difficult to understand. It's been designed in an exceptionally simple way and is particularly only right after I finished reading this ebook in which basically modified me, alter the way I believe.

Original publisher: Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala. : USAF Counterproliferation Center, Air University, 2002 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)269367370 Subject: Bioterrorism -- Prevention. Excerpt: . . . Surveillance and Detection. . . 5 II. Local Disease Surveillance and Detection by Physicians The current system of medical response to a bioterrorism attack in the United States emphasizes the critical role of the first responders, the local emergency care systems, in the initial period of a biological attack. Knowing that a biological attack has occurred (detection) is the first challenge faced by first responders, since biological agents lend themselves to clandestine dissemination in the air, food or water supply. The release would most likely be unannounced by the attacker and would most certainly be undetected. For example, an airborne or aerosol release would produce a cloud that would be invisible, odorless, and tasteless. Depending on the biological agent used, no one would know until days or weeks later that anyone had been infected. This knowledge would come long after a considerable amount of damage had been done. It is highly probable that most victims of an unannounced biological attack will delay seeking medical care because most of the biological agents used in such attacks will manifest flu-like symptoms in the early stages of infection. Because of this delayed reaction, even the possibility of a bioterrorist attack causes trepidation in the medical community. It is not surprising that first responders from 22 cities who attended federal bioterrorism preparedness planning, training and equipment programs provided an average self-assessment rating of 4. 1 out of a possible 10 points for their municipality's medical bioterrorism response capability. These poor ratings are indicative of just how far emergency officials in...
