Excerpt: .So off I go; and, having duly dressed and weighed, don my great coat, and wait for the important event of the day. CHAPTER III. who s that young chap? I overhear a horsey-looking customer, in a heavy white great coat and a blue bird s-eye tie (the latter article showing off the brilliant crimson colour of his countenance to much advantage), ask his friend. I niver see im afore to my knowledge. Can he ride any? I try to look as if it was anything but my first appearance in silk; but I fear the attempt is rather a failure. Hang it; I wish I hadn t smoked those two cigars last night, I think to myself. I wonder if Charlie has got a flask in his pocket; I feel as if I should like some jumping powder. Tinkle, tinkle, goes the bell...
